SITUATION SUMMARY

Northern California Weather of Concern

A low pressure system in the eastern Pacific will bring cooler, wet weather to Interior Northern California beyond midweek. Ahead of the storm, breezy conditions and low humidity Tuesday afternoon into Wednesday evening will increase the potential for fires to develop and spread rapidly. Precipitation potential for Interior Northern California increases in the Coastal mountains Wednesday, spreading over much of the forecast area into Thursday. Scattered showers and mountain thunderstorms are possible Friday.

Potential Impacts

- Fire weather concerns Tuesday and Wednesday ahead of storm.
 - Potential aggressive wildfire growth in the mountains.
 - A Red Flag Warning is in effect for the West Slope Sierra Nevada from 1400 Tuesday to 2000 hours Wednesday for wind and low relative humidity. This Warning extends from the Burney Basin to north of Yosemite for elevations above 3000 ft. Humidity 15-25 percent and southwest winds 15 to 25 mph with gusts 35 to 45 MPH. These conditions have potential to cause rapid fire growth over existing fires, especially the King Fire.
- Moderate to strong winds
 - Moderate to strong winds will provide an environment for rapid fire spread ahead of the rainfall on Tuesday and Wednesday.
- Heavy precipitation
 - A prolonged period of moderate to heavy rain could result in rock slides, mudslides and flooding on burn scars from wildfires this summer and last summer.
 - Flash Flood Watch in effect from Wednesday morning through Wednesday night in or near wildfire burn scar areas in central, north central, southeast, and western Siskiyou County. This includes the Happy Camp, July, Beaver, and Oregon Gulch Complexes. Since the Boles Fire in Weed was on fairly level, urban terrain, impacts from the approaching storm are not a major concern there.
 - There is concern for Mud Creek on Mt. Shasta where a debris flow occurred on Saturday, 09/20/14. The rain may cause additional flows due to the destabilized canyon walls. Two staff from the NWS Medford Weather Forecast Office surveyed the area; the only expected significant impacts there will be to the two (Forest Service) roads impacted over the weekend. No adverse impacts are expected for CA Highway 89.
 - Moderate rainfall will help suppress wildfire activity, beginning Wednesday afternoon.
- Colder temperatures
 - Night time temperatures will be cool some frosts are possible at higher elevations; a widespread freeze is not expected at this time.
 - Snow levels are likely to remain high; 8,500-10,000 feet.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

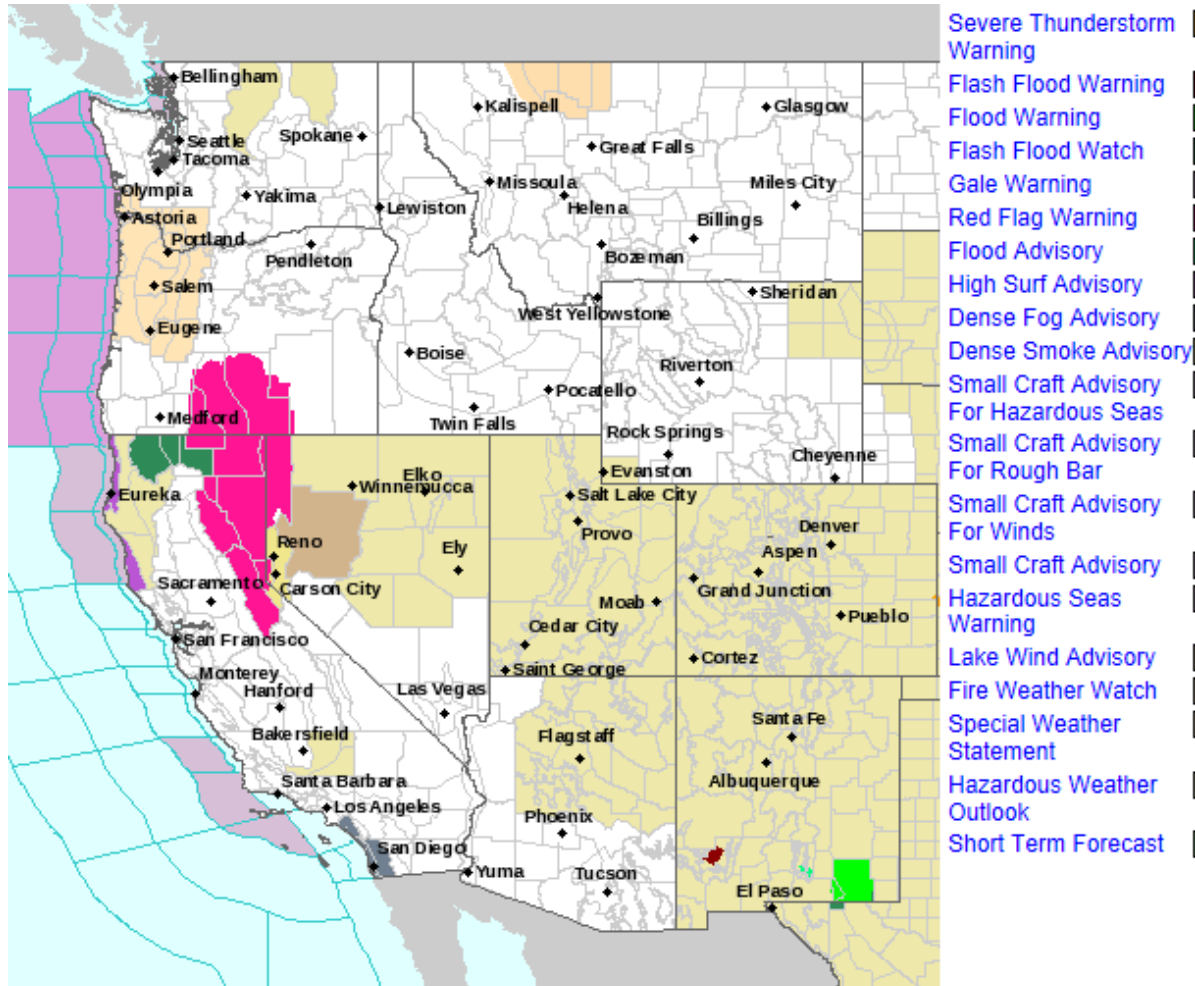

Deep Pacific low pressure slowly approaches northern California over the next few days, moving onshore by Thursday with widespread rain and much cooler, more humid conditions. However, ahead of this system, much of the region will experience strengthening S to W winds while the air mass is still relatively dry. Strongest winds today (20-40 mph) will be across the Modoc Plateau where high risk is in effect. Winds will be nearly as strong across the higher slopes of the Sierra/Cascades, but fuels there are above critically dry levels. Wednesday will feature gusty S-W winds as well, but humidity should be steadily rising, remaining above 25-35% in most areas, with rain moving into northwest California late in the day. Otherwise an extended period of cool, moist conditions late Wednesday thru Friday with long duration rain across the northern 2/3rds of the region. Lighter showers south of the I-80 corridor, but humidity will remain very high over a long duration. Warming and drying trend over the weekend into next week as Pacific high pressure builds in with some offshore flow.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

High pressure will continue to bring sunny and warm weather to the area through Wednesday. Temperatures during the next two days will be in the 70s in the mountains to the lower to mid 90s in the valleys. Although winds will be light over most areas, west and southwest winds of 15-25 mph with gusts to 35 mph can be expected in the higher elevations of the Sierras north of Tuolumne County this afternoon. Minimum relative humidity may fall into the teens in the windier areas during the afternoon. Thursday, a cold front is expected to reach the state as a deep Pacific Northwest system heads inland. The front will bring rain to the northern half of the state and light showers will be possible as far south as Monterey County during the day Thursday. Some light rain will also be possible in the Sierras from Yosemite National Park northward with snow possible above the timberline. Elsewhere, look for high temperatures to drop 10-15 degrees. It will turn windy across areas in and near the deserts during the second half of the week. Some west winds up to 50 mph will be possible over the high deserts by Thursday afternoon. Friday, an upper level low may form along the central coast, bringing isolated wet thunderstorms to the Sierras. More widespread thunderstorms may occur over the far eastern deserts Friday afternoon and evening. Look for cool weather to persist into the weekend with deep and widespread marine layer coverage. High temperatures will only be in the 70s to lower 80s in the valleys Friday and Saturday. Some gusty winds may occur in Santa Barbara County and the I-5 Corridor Saturday night into Sunday. Look for a slow warm-up early next week under northwesterly flow. However, by the middle of next week, offshore flow may occur across Southern California.

Participants included several voluntary organizations, state and federal VAL, and leadership from Northern CA and Solano VOAD. A presentation on long term recovery and update on current recovery efforts was provided. Due to the absence of local faith based and other organizations that may have resources, SVOAD will reach out to expand the engagement of additional nonprofit and faith based partners. Once the organizations are identified, a follow up meeting will be held in hopes of identifying key leaders interested in forming a LTR committee.
